Hoover In Touch

Washington, June 11.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover has assumed active interest in his fight for the presidential nomination from the Republican national convention. He is in direct and constant touch with his forces through a leased telephone wire from his desk here to Kansas City.

Kansas City, June 11.—(AP)—The tentative draft of the Republican party platform as embodying the administration ideas on the questions of the day was completed today by Senator Smoot, of Utah, who is to be chairman of the platform committee.

While party leaders are hopeful of settling all controversies over the platform in the committee it was conceded that there was a possibility of several questions coming before the convention.

Efforts to compose the views of the farm leaders on the agricultural plank still went forward today with no immediate prospect of success.

loose clusters on the under sides of bean leaves.

"The larvae resemble diminutive porcupines. When first hatched they are greenish colored, turning to dark yellow when fully mature. Their backs are thickly covered with long, black, branched spines.

"The pupal or resting stage is light yellow in color, roundish in shape, and attached to the under sides of the leaves. The last larval skin appears at the point of attachment to the leaf.

"Mexican bean beetles can best be controlled by applications of stomach poisons, of which there are few different kinds at present. Calcium arsenate treatment is recommended by the State College entomologists. Calcium arsenate, one pound; dusting sulphur, one pound, and hydrated lime, four pounds, compose one of the dusts. Another is applied at the rate of one pound of calcium arsenate and nine pounds of hydrated lime.

A spray can be used at the rate of three-fourths pound of calcium arsenate, one and one-half pounds of hydrated lime, and 50 gallons of water or three-fourths ounce of calcium arsenate, one and one-half ounce of hydrated lime, and three gallons of water. Whether dust or liquid spray is used, the material must be directed toward the under sides of the bean leaves where the insect feeds mainly."

OLD MANOR TO GO ON BLOCK

Catoctin Manor, Owned by First Governor of Maryland, Will be Sold.

One of the oldest manors in this section will be placed on the auction block at 3 p. m. next Saturday.

It is the famous Catoctin Manor built by Thomas Johnson, Maryland's first governor, a hundred and fifty-eight years ago.

In speaking of the sale, the Baltimore Sun says: "With 6,000 acres of parks and game preserves extending from the summit of the Blue Ridge Mountains on the west to the Washington-Gettysburg Highway on the east, the old house is said to be in a fine state of preservation.

Situated near Frederick "Sited about twelve miles north of Frederick, the estate has been the scene of important events and ceremonies in American history. Within a few years after its occupation, two furnaces and forges there were turning out cannon and balls for the revolutionists.

"In a courthouse on the southern border of the estate, the twelve immortal judges of Maryland announced their famous repudiation of the Stamp act. In the readjustment following peace, Governor Johnson's home became the center of government, both federal and state.

Center in Civil War "In the next national crisis the manor was the center of maneuvers and battles that culminated in Antietam and Gettysburg; federal and southern troops occupying the estate successively as the fortunes of war shifted.

"Last year Lanecot Jacques, Sr., of Smithsburg, a direct descendant of the Lanecot Jacques who was in partnership with Governor Johnson in the iron foundry business on the estate, purchased the manor and improved it as a park and game preserve. Fish streams, miles of bridge paths and preserves were laid out by Mr. Jacques.

"Arthur C. Sheridan, New York real estate man, will conduct the auction. Social centers throughout the country are expected to be represented among the prospective purchasers at the sale, which will be held on the manor grounds."

Miss Laura Harlan, daughter of Justice Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, who was social secretary at the White House during the Roosevelt, Harding and Wilson administrations and who is still consulted on any special social functions at the White House, will attend the sale. Miss Harlan has visited Catoctin Manor and has been greatly impressed with its beauty. Owing to her extremely high social connections it is expected the sale will draw quite a few of Washington's select.

BOY BURNED BY TORPEDOES

Columbia, June 11.—Twelve-year-old Robert Sloed thinks he is lucky to be in a hospital instead of in an undertaker's morgue.

To be prepared to celebrate the Fourth of July, the lad late Saturday purchased a dozen giant torpedoes at a store outside of the borough limits. These he placed in his pocket and ran to his home. Entering the yard, he threw his arms about a sand bag he had suspended from a rope to be used as a punching bag.

As it swung back and forth the bag's rope snapped and Robert dropped to the ground. He landed on his right hip with such force that the torpedoes were exploded, tearing a hole nine inches in diameter in the flesh and shattering all the muscles.

At the hospital surgeons removed the burned flesh and hundreds of small pebbles, after which they administered antitoxin to guard against tetanus. The lad's condition is serious, and if he recovers he will be crippled for life.

ITALIA CREW WALK OVER ICE

On Way to Safety in Two Parties; Ask Russia For Ice-breakers.

King's Bay, June 11.—(AP)—Safe after a perilous landing on the Arctic seas in the partially wrecked dirigible Italia the crew of the north pole airship was still in gravest danger today as expeditions by land, air and sea got under-way to bring them out of the frozen wastes north of Spitzbergen. Speed was the watchword of the rescuers for every moment lost meant an increase in the danger that the 18 men, now adrift on breaking ice floes, might be carried into the open sea.

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, June 11.—Bearing two of their number who were injured when the Italia came down on the ice of the Arctic Ocean, the crew of the big dirigible are making perilous progress toward land. The eighteen men have divided into two parties, presumably to allow a few of the stronger to reach the rescue ships and guide the relief expeditions back to the main body.

Open water leads among the floes are making the progress slow and dangerous. At times the men are born out of their course as the wind or sea currents drift the floes east or south. When the drift is toward the west, there is that much gain for the refugees.

Boats to get them from their predicament constitute the need of the moment. The crew has provisions for six weeks.

All this was revealed in radio conversations yesterday. The Citta Di Milano kept in constant touch with General Nobile's men, each message, however, accentuating the peril and the necessity for speed in rescue.

In the face of this condition, Captain Romanga, of the Citta Di Milano, has asked the Italian minister to Norway to request aid of the Russian government, which possesses the most powerful ice breakers.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS
The bewitching Betsy Patterson is staying with her father at Sweet Springs Inn. Surrounded by admirers she is secretly attracted to her French tutor, the handsome La Vert. Two French officers arrive at the inn and salute La Vert deferentially as the runaway Captain Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon. They agree to give him another hour incognito. He finds Betsy thrilling at the prospect of entertaining Jerome Bonaparte in Baltimore. But realizing that this will mean parting from La Vert she later tries to dissuade her father from taking her back to Baltimore to act as hostess to the distinguished guest.

"Sir!" Jerome interrupted holding up his hand as though in utter amazement at any such suspicion. "Be assured, nothing is further from my thoughts. I should never dream—"

"Of following in the footsteps of her former tutors," Jerome assured him in all seriousness.

"Why not, sir?" he spluttered. "What do you mean by such an insult? Better men than you have loved my Betsy." He put his arms about his daughter's waist as though to defend her from such imprecations. You infernal—

"Papa!" Betsy stopped her father. "Well, that's enough to drive any father mad," Patterson snorted.

still aggrieved at the idea that this man did not seem to think Mistress Betsy the most desirable and most desired of all women. "To think that there should be a man in the world who doesn't love my Betsy." He looked fondly at his daughter, whose red head quite topped his own gray pate. "But he's not a man, Betsy," he consoled his daughter by casting aspersions at this person who enraged him. "He's only a tutor."

Jerome looked at Betsy, smiling slightly, and bowed.

"Why don't you get mad and contradict me," he demanded of the silent tutor. "No? Well, remember, then, our contract ends when I leave these Springs for Baltimore. Hurry the lesson, Betsy," he turned to his daughter, "and don't mind a word of what he said about Jerome Bonaparte." He started once more towards his bedroom, but turned to deliver a parting shot.

"Whose shoes," he snorted, "I make no doubt he would be very glad to stand in."

"I?" the tutor questioned.

"Yes, you," the Major returned with asperity.

"Wouldn't make love to my Betsy," he mimicked. "Nothing further from my thoughts! Ho! I'll explode!" He stalked into his room with as much dignity as his portly body would allow and slammed the door behind him.

"You know I meant to offend," Jerome turned to Betsy after the tirade was over. "But your father seems willfully to misunderstand me."

"Oh, that's a sign of affection," Betsy laughed. "Yes, he always acts contrary with me—he loves me simply to make conversation and so have an excuse for remaining longer in my company."

"Decidedly original. Is it not?" Jerome smiled. "But our lesson—we must continue the French lesson, Ma'mselle."

"Oh, yes, of course. I'll send the others away," Betsy decided. "We can't study in my suite—Aunt Ellen is packing and she'll be in such a state! Gentlemen," she turned to the group at the window, "may I ask you to retire—this will be my last lesson at the Springs. And I have to pack too. But I will see you all before I leave."

Amid exclamations of regret and expressions of sorrow the men made their bows and promises to be in Baltimore before Betsy departed.

self arrived there—unless she talked her father out of leaving—and took their hats and their departure.

"Mary, dear," Betsy turned to her cousin, "will you please tell Aunt Ellen to be very careful of my new evening gown? She always has such a time with it."

"Why, of course, Betsy," Mary smiled and disappeared through the French window.

CHAPTER VII
Once more Betsy faced her tutor. But now her anger was forgotten in the excitement the morning's news had produced. She seated herself in the chair her tutor placed for her beside the small table towards the windows and rested her arm along its black marble top.

"Do you know," she looked up at Jerome, who stood across the table from her, French book in hand, "you positively made me long to see Jerome Bonaparte?"

"After all I have said?" The tutor raised surprised eyebrows.

"Yes, indeed," Betsy shook her head vigorously. "Is he like Napoleon?" she questioned eagerly.

Jerome looked out the window and over the garden before he answered. "Not very much, and yet," he hesitated, "yet people have noticed the resemblance."

"You know," Betsy cocked her head to one side like a small bird and studied her instructor's face intently. "I never look at the pictures of Napoleon but in them I see a strong resemblance to you. Oh, do let my last lesson be about him."

"How you admire that man!" Jerome retorted sharply.

Jerome stepped back and bowed. "Let us choose something with more heart in it for this lesson."

He spoke so softly that Betsy could scarcely hear him, but she could read the disappointment in his averted eyes. He paused for a moment, as though considering. Then he sat down opposite his pupil and began. "He is all patriotism!" He was choosing his words carefully and his meaning quite as deliberate.

"To him a man should hold his country as the Romans held Rome. At her call he should forsake all else—his pleasures, his hopes, his love—cleaving only to his mother country. She is his demanding mistress—the ruler of his heart."

"Oh, he is wonderful," Betsy exclaimed, her eyes shining. "I have dreamed of such a man," Betsy mused.

"He is greater than any one I have ever known. I would give anything just to see him—to look at him!" Her voice trailed off into a land of dreams of her own invention. Then she turned on Jerome suddenly. "Why don't you be a soldier?" she demanded.

"Napoleon would not like a Frenchman like you to remain a simple tutor."

"And leave this country—and you—Betsy?" He leaned across the table and gazed into the eyes of the girl.

Betsy drew herself up proudly. "I think nothing should be too dear or too sacred to give up. If Napoleon should say, 'It is for France!'"

"It is for France!" he repeated. "It is for France!" The words rang in his ears with familiar resonance. "But suppose I—"

He leaned forward once more, but as quickly drew back. No, he must keep fast hold of his secret until the proper moment arrived.

"Why, what is it?" Betsy asked eagerly.

"I was just marveling that you, who are so fitted to grace a throne—should—" he started to answer.

"Oh, do you really think so," Betsy interrupted him, her face flushing with delight. "Napoleon's brother may be made king—and he—I am going to—"

She rose and walked about the room, scarcely able to contain her happiness at the very thought of meeting the brother of the great consul of France. Visions of a royal court flashed through her mind. She could picture herself seated on a golden throne, while courtiers came and bowed, doing her homage. The great Napoleon himself would acknowledge her sovereignty.

"Going to what?" Jerome broke into her dream, asking the revelation of her thoughts.

She stopped, startled; then raised her head and answered with a laugh. "Don't provoke the aspiring folly of my ambition," she countered.

"But for your sex, Ma'mselle," Jerome smiled, "ambition has so narrow and so circumscribed a field. You can conquer no worlds, wield no swords."

"Perhaps not in the sense that a man can," Betsy admitted. "But how many women are the powers behind the thrones? How many women have inspired the conquests of men—sent their husbands and lovers into battle for their own sakes? Now, suppose I were wedded to some great man. Why, so long as he toiled, I should breathe in his hopes and be ambitious for his honor."

Popularity

The play that is pleasing thousands is the play to see. The book everybody's talking about is the book to read. People whom others like, you want to meet.

Popularity, after all, is the public's stamp of approval. Plays and books and people become popular because we like them.

A new soap or a vacuum cleaner or a dress material is not so much popular because it's advertised as it is advertised because it's popular. That is, it must meet your every requirement, else it would be a waste of money to advertise it.

The products you find advertised in these pages are popular products. They have been weighed and found worthy.

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel—The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Married.—On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Mr. Boyer, William D. Ramsey, Esq., of this borough, to Miss Charlotte Arnold, daughter of Dr. John B. Arnold, deceased, of Tyrone township.
On Thursday last in York, Samuel Diehl, of Menallen township, to Miss Broehm, daughter of Jacob Broehm, of Tyrone township.
On Thursday, the 29th ult., by the Rev. L. L. Hirsch, Thomas Kennedy to Miss Mary Ann Underwood, both of Tyrone township.
On Thursday last, by the same, Charles Firestone, of Reading township, to Miss Catharine Gardner, of Huntington township.

A specimen of coffee from the American colony at Liberia has been received at Baltimore and is pronounced by good judges to be equal, if not superior, to Java coffee. It was gathered by the natives of Africa, and sold to the Colonists for about three cents a pound. A considerable trade in this article will be carried on, ere long, between this country and the colony.

Died.—On Monday, the 26th ult., Miss Matilda Slough, of this borough, in the 16th year of her age.

On Monday, the 2nd inst., Samuel M'Nair, Esq., of Liberty township, in the 65th year of his age.
On Sunday, the 15th ult., Robert S. M'Creary, aged 5 years; on Thursday, the 22nd, Margaret M'Creary, aged 7 years, and on Thursday, the 29th, Stephen Calvin M'Creary, aged two years, eight months—all children of William M'Creary, of Liberty township.

Masnie.—Apollo Lodge, No. 49, held in the city of Troy, New York, has passed a resolution appropriating twenty-five dollars to be applied to the redemption from execution of the furniture, library and plate of the late De Witt Clinton, which had been presented to him for public services, and have appointed a committee to invite other lodges to follow their example.

Land Pirates.—It appears from the Salem Register, that a parcel of land pirates inhabit the town of Chatham, on the coast of Essex county, Mass. In the month of April, the brig Rover, of Salem, from Matanzas, with a cargo of sugar, molasses, coffee and fruit was cast ashore there in a storm—having been driven over the breakers by the tempest. While the captain was making arrangements to employ respectable wreckers to assist in saving as much of the cargo as he could, his vessel was boarded by 200 people who broke open boxes and stole almost everything, even the sails, rigging and anchor of the brig, cargo and cabin utensils; indeed everything was cut away and carried away, much of it in the night.

Samuel Fahnestock, Esq., has resigned the office of Post Master at Abbotstown in this county, and Jacob Fahnestock has been appointed in his room.
Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.—We understand that the board of directors have chosen the southern route for the passage of railroad and that the Engineers are now engaged in the actual location of the road between this city and the "Point of Rocks" on the Potomac, preparatory to the commencing of the work, on the coming Fourth of July.

Balt. Amer.
SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
The Postoffice.—"The long agony is over" and we have at last a new postmaster. William Gillespie has been the successful applicant. He received his commission on Friday evening last. We learn that he will not enter upon the duties of his office before the 1st of July.

Married.—On the 5th inst., by the Rev. P. Anstadt, Jacob Bates, of Cumberland county, to Miss Julia Ann Maria, daughter of Peter Culp, of this borough.
On the 31st ult., by the Rev. J. Ulrich, James M. Sidesinger, to Miss Lydia Ann Myers, all of this county.

Chicago.—The wonderful progress and prosperity of Chicago may be learned from the simple fact that on a single day, Thursday, May 27th, there were four hundred and eighty arrivals of strangers at the five principal hotels in the city! A few years ago, the ground on which Chicago is built was a wilderness and prairie—now it is altogether the most flourishing inland city in the Union. Real estate there commands a much higher price than it does in Pittsburgh.

Our Relations with Mexico.—Another war with Mexico is not at all improbable, especially as the government will most probably sustain Governor Lane in his claim upon the Mesilla Valley as a part of the United States—and Santa Anna with all experiences before him may be nothing loth to give tangible vent to his bitter feelings of hostility to the United States in this way. It is understood by the way, that the U. S. steamer Vixen, which lately sailed with sealed orders, has gone to Vera Cruz, to wait the movements of Santa Anna.

England.—The English Cabinet has been summoned by the queen to deliberate on the condition of affairs at the east which together with the declaration of Lord John Russell, that Turkey should be protected, excited much attention.

Persia.—The Mormon elders have been expelled from Persia.

The directors of the public schools of the south ward in York, on Wednesday, gave a picnic to the children attending the schools. There were 513 of them present and they enjoyed themselves highly. There was a great variety of cakes and lemonade provided in abundance for their refreshment. Such consideration for the comfort and enjoyment of the children is highly creditable to the directors, and it may be well for others to follow the example.

(Ad.) Fare Reduced.—From Gettysburg to York. The fare by coaches from Gettysburg to York has been reduced to $1.50, and round tickets will be given for

On reaching Miss Goose's Tea House, Uncle Lucky hitched the Luckymobile to a tree and hopped in,—not the tree, you know, but the Tea House.

"I'm so glad to see you," cried pretty Miss Goose,—very pretty, indeed, under her lace bonnet, with a string of pearls around her slim white feathered throat. And leading the two little rabbits into the dining room, she handed them the bill of fare. Of course, the first thing the little bunny wanted was carrot ice cream, but the old gentleman rabbit said no. "We must eat something solid first," he went on, scanning the little card on which was printed:

- "Lettuce Leaf Sandwiches 25
- Carrot Cup Cakes 15
- Carrot Ice Cream 25
- Turnip Tea 25
- Carrot Coffee 15

"Two lettuce leaf sandwiches," said Uncle Lucky, all of a sudden, with a wink at pretty Miss Goose. "And a pot of turnip tea!" But for desert the little rabbit got his carrot ice cream.

Then for some little time the dear old gentleman rabbit sat on the front porch to enjoy his cabbage leaf cigar and the little rabbit a lemon lollypop, while Mrs. Moon smiled down from the sky, making the road as bright as in the daytime.

"We won't have any trouble getting home," chuckled the old gentleman bunny, throwing away his half smoked cigar, and hopping into the Luckymobile. But Oh dear me! When people say there won't be any trouble it often happens that trouble is just getting ready for them. And so it happened. Before these two dear little rabbits had gone a mile or more, all of a sudden, just like that, down fell a great big limb from a tree. Right across the road it fell, and there it lay, heavy as lead, and maybe heavier. Goodness me! If the little rabbit hile up the rails and over the limb with never a slip and nary a skid. Clever Uncle Lucky.

"You're the brightest Scarecrow I've ever met. Come down to my bank tomorrow and I'll give you a job," cried delighted Uncle Lucky.

And away he drove in the lovely moonlight. And if nothing dreadful happens these two little bunnies should reach home in the next story as sure as my name is Uncle Dave Cory.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOCKED LIVES

THE persons who lock themselves in, having little or no regard for those outside, are among the most baffling, as well as unsatisfactory, folks in this world.

We do not love people whom we do not know. And to know much about a person, be that knowledge both bad and good, is to give us an opportunity to make that person our friend.

Our friends must always be good mixtures—just a little bad with the good to make us sure that they are human.

But, oh, those who lock themselves up and say little or nothing, who close their doors and lock them, and don't even peek out the windows! Those who merely take and give nothing, who shrug, and smile, and sneer—people with locked lives!

No one can be happy in a house of silence. No one can be happy without spreading, radiating, and reaching out. Human life is a stream. It is a stream made for all of us—big and little. We must get into that stream and, insofar as possible, add to its ripple, its movement and its possibility as a force in human events and all achievement.

Each life should be liquid to a large extent. Our thoughts, our actions, even, should flow through other lives, and all that we do form a part of the business of the world. Of course many of us feel that we are small and wholly unimportant, but that doesn't excuse our responsibilities—and each human life has an individual responsibility toward all life.

And it isn't until we feel this responsibility sincerely and deeply that we are able to forget our small selves and enlarge into selves that have controlling power over other lives.

To pass by a house that is closed, the windows barred, and the doors with big padlocks on them, is always a depressing sight to me. It makes me think of people who look like that, and it makes me think that the world has been grossly robbed of something that it ought to have. I don't like homes, either, with big, high fences about them. Too many people have enclosed lives in the same way.

I like lives with the "Welcome" sign written all over them, in their faces, in their very attitude. Who doesn't?

For the matinee, or a civic meeting or a luncheon at the Women's Club this dress has a manner and poise. Many a woman doesn't know quite what to do about a velvet dress, which she is sure to need. Here is a suggestion. By omitting the trimming bands and leaving the vest and collar of lace this gown meets that necessary simplicity and quiet sophistication which save a velvet dress from being too "dresy." For the woman who prefers silk or satin crepe or trepe roma the trimming bands may be of a lighter or darker shade of the material, or velvet to match. The V neck of the bodice and the slashed over skirt are particularly good for the matronly figure.

Eat as You Did in Childhood
How you can safely eat whatever you fancy

Do you remember the school days long ago when your appetite was good and you could "eat anything"?
Perhaps you yearn for a digestion like that now? You can have it, and easily too!

Most digestive trouble is due to excess stomach acid which ferments the food and causes painful gases to dilate your stomach. Obviously you can only end indigestion and stomach pain by ridding yourself of this root cause, acidity.
The quickest, surest and safest way to do this is to take Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. This brings prompt relief because it instantly neutralizes the excess acid in your stomach and then soothes, heals and strengthens the acid-weakened tissues.

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy is of such great therapeutic value in the treatment of digestive troubles that it relieves cases of fifteen and twenty years' standing. Don't delay—get a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy from your druggist today. It will give you relief relief, so that instead of suffering after each meal you will al-gestion. Special agent: People's
